

Weaving a revolution, one piece at a time

Author - Shoba Narayan, Published on - 23.3.2014

Mass-produced yarn from spinning mills increases production but neutralizes the quirky variations of regional Indian textiles. In the past, cotton itself went by many names:

bafta

,
nainsukh

,
dosuti

,
moree

,
jamdani

,
mulmul

,
chint

,
mashru

,
himroo

and others. Now, they all have morphed into Westside or Big Bazaar cotton. Read more about Malkha here/Download Know more about Malkha Watch Uzramma founder of Malkha fabrics sharing her experience in creating sustainable enterprises for textile production in India. First Published in Live Mint, Thu, Jul 15 2010 Read a report on Uzramma's talk: 'Native varieties of cotton disappearing'